Lauren Jones

January 23, 2024

Philosophy of Teaching

As a future elementary school teacher that will work in an elementary school setting it's important that I reflect on my beliefs, my goals, and how I want to foster my classroom. As a future teacher I believe that reflecting can help me become focused and aligned with my values. It's important that I can improve my teaching practices and make a positive impact on my students in the classroom. I think reflecting can help me stay motivated and passionate about my work.

I believe that every student in my classroom is equally capable of learning and every student can succeed and achieve goals. As a teacher I believe every student is smart and capable to learn. I also believe in the importance of creating a safe and inclusive learning environment. When I was in school I felt that my teacher made the classroom safe for me to learn and I want to do that with my future students. I came from a broken family and so being able to feel safe in a classroom really helped me be able to focus and learn. I want students to feel like in my classroom that it can be a safe space for them where they can build strong relationships and build life skills along with learning academically. I also have goals that I want to implement in my classroom. I want to create a positive learning environment where students feel welcome and valued. It's important that my students feel comfortable in their environment to learn. I want to remind my students as well of the rules in the classroom to be kind. Another important goal of mine is that my students will develop a growth mindset. I want to teach them that they can overcome challenges. As a future teacher I am excited to implement my beliefs and goals into my future classroom and to help the future generation of students.